Romanes eunt domus

“It--it says, ‘Romans, go home’” – Brian (student/artist)

Romanes eunt domus is an insight into the Latin classroom of 2,000 years ago.

Rehearsals:

Once Emilia, Chi and I signed up we started rehearsing. We read through the script and started to block and stage a few bits. After a few days we knew our lines, so we practiced at break and lunch times with the white board. I really enjoyed rehearsals as they were fun and relaxed.

Romanes they go to the house?” –

Show night!

Before the performance:

Before the show we were a bit nervous, but we did a little bit of practicing and we got on our costume (the Centurion had a sword, shield and a helmet) (I had a pen and white board). I really enjoyed the show and thought it was well curated.

After the performance:

Our performance was fun, and we really enjoyed it, we thought it went well. A funny moment, I remember, when my character always had to say “er, um or oh” and it was funny because the Centurion or soldiers had to look at me with a confused expression and had to correct me.
